Calculate the square root of a number or mathematical expression. The Port of New Orleans through Port of New Orleans Agency (PNOA) has announced that Port Metro New Orleans, which operates the area's largest vehicle/passenger terminal, is ranked among the top five ports in the country for environmental impact and safety. The ranking is part of the 2011 Green Good Harbor Award, which recognizes U.S. ports that have excelled at reducing harmful environmental impacts and complying with government regulations. Port Metro was chosen from among more than 2,500 ports, terminals and shipping lines that are part of the Green Good Harbor Alliance, a partnership of five large organizations devoted to cleaning the nation's waterways. Port Metro joins 19 other ports nationwide that have received Green Good Harbor Awards. Port Metro was also honored for one of the nation's lowest rates of serious injury, an environment friendly commodities strategy, a safety program aimed at decreasing the number of accidents on the highways that connect to the port and an ability to raise awareness of water pollution in the Gulf of Mexico. Port Metro will be one of two local organizations recognized for a team effort to raise awareness of the nation's largest source of wastewater pollution, the Gulf of Mexico. The team includes the Gulf of Mexico Research Initiative, an initiative to improve Gulf of Mexico research and promote Gulf of Mexico sustainability. More than 50 environmental groups, businesses, state and local governments, public agencies and nongovernmental organizations from across the nation were selected by the Green Good Harbor Alliance for the 2011 awards. The 2011 Green Good Harbor Awards will be presented at a special event during the Greenport, N.Y., Waterfront Festival in late July. [Continued] Today, the Port of New Orleans through Port of New Orleans Agency (PNOA) will name Port Metro New Orleans the Port of New Orleans Agency (PNOA) 2013 Safety Award winner for their outstanding safety record. The Safety Award is awarded by the International Association of Professional Ferry Pilots (IAPFP) to recognize the PNOA's continued dedication to port safety by improving port management policies and procedures that directly or indirectly affect the safety of vessels, crews, or the public. PNOA received the Safety Award after meeting the IAPFP's eight safety benchmarks that include the Safety Leadership,

Emergency Response and Communications, Physical Security, Vessel Safety, Maritime Operations, Maritime Compliance and Maintenance, Vessel Security and Reporting Systems, and the Port Facility Protection and Security. "This is another example of PNOA's continued dedication to safety in
