That's good news for thousands of American Muslims. Most of them are staunch opponents of violence of any kind, including this deadly variety. The researchers did find that most of those involved were not pleased with the way their religion was portrayed on the news. It was not the role of the media to decide what Muslims think about terrorism, they argued. What they did do, however, was meet with a wide range of Muslim leaders, including a select group of imams. They found that most
